

Your socio-economic footprint

The existence of your business or organisation undoubtedly triggers a positive dynamic in the rest of the economy and in society. You create employment and value added, you contribute to local community projects, you purchase products and services from other companies, employees spend their income in the economy ... In this way, economic and societal spill overs are generated.

You might find yourself asking...

How can we highlight the socio-economic importance of our organisation for the region with attractive visuals in our communications?

What are the economic and tax returns of the activities or events we have organised? How can we quantify the multiplier effects of the grants received or the investments made?

How can we strengthen the support for our investment plans with figures on the socio-economic return that our organisation will bring to its environment?

Which activities need fine-tuning to increase the societal impact of our project? How can we demonstrate this impact in an objective way to our investors or government?
